

ALBERT W. FULTON, FORMER BREMEN TWP. OFFICIAL PASSES ON

Albert W. Fulton, one of Bremen township's best known men and one who has been before the public in public office for many years, answered the final call at his home in Bremen township on March 28 at the age of 67 years, and 8 months.

He is mourned by his wife, Annie H. nee Kruspe, one daughter, Leila A. Moss and one son Leonard E. Fulton, all of Tinley Park.

Mr. Fulton was the youngest of a family of 10 children of which only one brother James of Tinley Park, is living. He was born and raised on the farm he resided on at the time of his death. He was born July 20, 1863. Besides his children he is also survived by four grand children, Glenn and Marian Moss and Marvin and Shirley Fulton. Mr. Fulton was married 38 years ago.

Mr. Fulton served the town of Bremen as assessor for many years. He was a friend to everyone from the little barefoot boy to the richest man.

Mr. Fulton was ailing since last fall with heart trouble but he was up and around until about 3 weeks ago when dropsy set in. He was taken to St. Francis hospital in Blue Island but was brought home at his request and death came quietly at a quarter of two o'clock Friday morning.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon in the Community hall in Tinley Park on account of the road leading to the home being impassable from recent snow.

Hundreds of friends and neighbors, public officials and relatives came from many miles around to pay their parting tribute of honor to one whom they had held in high esteem during his life among them.

Rev. Mr. Hopkins of Blue Island was the officiating clergyman and paid a marked eulogy to the departed as a husband, father, brother and neighbor and friend. He also was a member of the Tinley Park Camp of the M. W. A.

The funeral services were very impressive. The casket was flanked on each side by beautiful floral offerings from town officials, old time friends and relatives.

Gone but not forgotten.

Seek Right of Way For Bridges on The Wolf Road

The Will County bond issue right of way committee consisting of Supervisors North of Lockport, Seehausen of Crete and Grinton of Joliet called at the News-Bulletin office Wednesday in connection with securing the needed right of way for the two bridges to be built on the Wolf road south and north of Mokena. Parties from whom needed right of way is to be secured are being interviewed and they are expected to get together with the county committee at an early date.

Bids for both bridges were opened at the court house Saturday morning. The contracting firm of Doctor and Davidson of Orland Park were the low bidders. The contract will be let soon as the right of way is secured. The county board's plan is to have these bridges completed by August 1st.

The low bidders for the Maple st. bridges were the Joliet Bridge Co. who have been awarded the contract.

Frankfort Town Ticket Re-Elected

The Frankfort town election held on Tuesday was a tame affair, only 180 votes being cast in the entire township. The officers elected are: Supervisor, Wm. Kampe; town clerk, Henry A. Geuther; assessor, Joe Kohl; Constable Karl Kraus; Trustee of Schools, John F. Schultz. There was no opposition. The Republican ticket was the only one in the field.

ROUTS HOLDUPS WITH CHAIR

New Lenox has a fighting storekeeper who routs holdup men in spite of drawn revolvers. George Osmus who operates a small store in New Lenox has that distinction. Last Saturday evening two young fellows came in the store and made a few small purchases and tendered Mr. Osmus a bill. As he was handing the change to one of the men, they pulled out guns and said to him "Stick 'em up". Quick as a flash Mr. Osmus grabbed a chair near at hand and struck one of the holdup men on the head, knocking him down. He scrambled to his feet and with his partner quickly fled and escaped. Mrs. Osmus was in the store and witnessed the holdup.

The Farm Vote

Farmers are often spoken of by politicians as "men who easily forget". Just before an election is to be pulled off we are handed a lot of cheap cigars which are presumed to influence our votes. If we attend a political meeting we hear a lot of hokum which means nothing to us.

Will and DuPage county farmers should at least remember the two occasions when we found it necessary to visit Springfield, Illinois during the legislative sessions, in an effort to get some amendments into a couple of bills designed to jeopardize our business of dairy farming.

We should recall that Rep. Lott O'Neill voted as our committee requested her to do and that she used her influence in our behalf.

We must remember too, that when we found ourselves beaten at every turn, our cause apparently lost, it was Senator Barr who came to our rescue not only with his vote, but with his ability to legislate those amendments into the bills we desired changed.

At a Chicago meeting of more than five thousand farmers a resolution was unanimously adopted thanking Senator Barr for his efforts in our behalf. Speeches were made congratulating the 41st district in having so able a man as our state senator.

Blame Barr for Increased Taxes

A Lottie O'Neill meeting was held at the Mokena St. John Evangelical church parlors Tuesday evening. Both Mrs. O'Neill and Attorney A. H. Krusemark spoke. Mrs. O'Neill who is a candidate for the office of senator as against the present incumbent, Senator R. J. Barr, stated that her opponent was only working for the big interests and that no standard of high ideals is being maintained and that he is adding to the tax burdens of the poor people by helping to decrease the taxes of public utility interests. Mrs. O'Neill said she can back up all her statements with facts and that she is not afraid of being defeated. She characterized her race for the senatorship as an experiment to test the wish of the voters whether any person of ability from the ranks of the common people can aspire to this office or if only a candidate favorable to public utility interests can occupy the senate seat in Springfield. She said Gov. Emmer son has repeatedly said that she can get anything for her constituents that Barr can get at Springfield. She further said that the use of the hard roads and waterway matters as vote producers by Senator Barr, savored of the old Len Small tactics.

The Mokena Garden Club won third prize in the Bud and Bark division at the Flower Show at Hotel Sherman, Chicago the past week. The prize winning exhibit was beautiful sprays of flowering almond forced for the club by Mrs. Rose Bechstein. The rosy pink buds were just ready to break in bloom. The vase they were placed in belonged to Mrs. Wm. Lowe.

We are rather proud to think that our club took a prize with only six months of organization back of it. Then too, it was not only competing with clubs of long standing, but with wealth backing them. Mrs. Frank Tooley, chairman of all the Mokena exhibits wishes to thank everyone for their splendid co-operation given her by non-members as well as members. Everyone seemed willing to give or help where ever she or he could help. Mokena does not have to take a back seat for anyone of the eighteen exhibits entered of which nine were of the Bud and Bark class under Mrs. Wm. Lowe's supervision. Two garden tea tables by Mrs. Arthur C. Hall, one floral and fern room arrangement by Mrs. Harry Mall, four shadow box centers by Mrs. Rose Bechstein and Mrs. Herman Schweser; two posters with garden slogans by Mrs. J. Balaz and Mrs. A. Steele. Nearly every day since the flower show started groups of Mokena folk have been attending the flower show which is being held at the Sherman hotel. More than a dozen Mokena ladies attended the show Monday. Others are planning on going later.

Tuesday April 1st the Garden Club met at the home of Mrs. Rose Bechstein for the regular meeting. The session was opened by the reading of a poem "Spring" read by Mrs. A. Braun, the president. Different business matters were taken care of also. Mrs. Braun and Mrs. W. Lowe gave thanks to the members for their splendid co-operation in forcing and to help get things ready for the Flower Show.

The Mokena Garden Club decided to take their prize money and buy a weeping birch which is to be planted on the school grounds. Tinley Park Man Predicts Victory For Savage Unusual activity in the closing days of the campaign for the Republican primaries on April 8th is centered on the office of county treasurer in Cook county and with the addition of several important endorsements to the candidacy of Howard P. Savage indications point to his election next Tuesday.

Chas. F. Nielsen, Bremen township assessor issues the following statement clarifying confusion that has arisen with regard to Mr. Savage, whose name is similar in some respects to former public officials: "Howard P. Savage is running for office for the first time never having been in politics before. He is an engineer of recognized ability and the valuable service he had rendered in Chicago for 25 years. Mr. Savage was past National Commander of the American Legion in 1927, during which time he headed a peace expedition of 23,000 ex-service men to France. On the return of Mr. Savage from Europe, President Coolidge highly commended him for the valuable service he had rendered during the visit of the American Legion to France.

"Mr. Savage is recognized as a man of unusual business ability with a background of splendid character, so that his election to the important office of county treasurer will assure the people of this community an efficient and forceful administration of that office."

Advocates Two Distinct Townships For Frankfort

Charles Hirsch of Mokena has indicated a new plan for political harmony. He states that he thinks the township of Frankfort ought to be divided into two townships. He advocates that Mokena precinct ought to be a township by itself with its own town officers and Frankfort should be a township by itself also, thus the political friction which often is apparent would be eliminated. The only extra expense would be a new set of town officers. The election expenses would be the same as two election boards are needed at the present time on account of the two precincts. Mr. Hirsch would like to get the opinion of the people of Frankfort on this matter.

STORY FROM THE START

Returning to America, during the War of 1812, after a successful voyage, Capt. Lion Fellowes' merchant ship Sachem is sunk off Portugal by a British frigate. His crew surrenders, but Fellowes reaches shore exhausted. His life is saved by an English-speaking girl who conceals her identity. He learns from her, however, that she is about to set out for Lisbon. Fellowes goes to Lisbon, hoping to find a vessel America bound. He meets Capt. Chater, of the American ship True Bounty, an acquaintance. Chater offers him a berth as mate. Fellowes refuses, knowing Chater is disloyal in trading with the enemy. He meets the girl who saved his life, Cara Inglepin, daughter of the owner of the True Bounty.

"There's much in what you say," Fellowes owned. "I'm loath to disoblige you, ma'am. But 'tis wartime, and I'd not care to betray my sentiments."

Miss Inglepin blushed crimson; her slim body stiffened.

"And we have no wish to 'betray you, sir," she said coldly.

"You mistake my meaning, ma'am," protested Fellowes, much perturbed. "I merely tried to make it clear that in accepting your offer I was not abandoning my own opinions."

"Naow, naow, there ain't any call to be het up over a misunderstanding! We want a mate, and we want Cap'n Fellowes for the job—and he won't need to complain over his treatment," Chater struck in.

"But Captain Fellowes must decide for himself," insisted Miss Inglepin. "And he must decide in light of the fact—"

"Don't say nothin' ye'd be sorry for, Miss Cara," warned Chater.

"In light of the fact," she continued, ignoring the interruption, "that we are Federalists, heart-and-soul, and utterly opposed to this wicked, senseless war, and its attempt to cripple Britain at a time when she is fighting for the freedom of mankind against the vilest tyrant in history."

The vehemence of her declaration took Fellowes' breath away, arousing in him a respect all the greater for the concern Chater displayed.

"If you feel so, ma'am, I can but applaud your honesty in admitting it," he said. "Shall we elect to forget politics? And will it please you that I accept Captain Chater's offer?"

She swallowed hard, a suspicion of tears in her eyes.

"It will not please me," she answered. "And yet—and yet—you had best come. Good afternoon, sir, Captain Chater will escort you aboard."

And she swept regally into the hotel, the monstrous attendant waddling at her heels. Chater whinnied placatingly:

"Naow, naow! You daon't want to set too much store by wimmin's talk. 'Tis a lot on her mind, Miss Cara has. Fust off, her ma died. And then the war came, and her pa sent for her. And when she come back here her grandpa, he up and died. Fine old feller. Markess da Perenna."

"But what did she mean by saying it didn't please her for me to ship with you? And then saying I must come?"

Chater performed a very creditable leer.

"Easy to see ye ain't had much to do with young wimmin, friend. They talk all 'round the clock, I tell ye. And Miss Cara's spiled a mite. Her pa jest dotes on her, and her ma's family are grand folks. 'Heap o' money comin' to her." He cackled furiously. "Portygee money's as good as any, heh? Yes, sirree, Ben Inglepin, he knaoed what he was doin' when he married Donna Rosa."

"I don't care what she has," snapped Fellowes. "Unless it's a better disposition. Shall we go off to the ship? I ought to learn something of my duties, if we sail tomorrow."

"That's what I call a proper spirit," fawned Chater. "We'll get on fust rate, Cap'n Fellowes."

A stout craft, and well-found, the True Bounty. The crew were of a piece with their captain, dour New Englanders and Long Islanders from "Daown East," arrant Federalists to a man. Without a word of politics being uttered in his hearing, Fellowes understood that he was alone in his opinion, spiritually isolated from the ship's company. Nor could all Chater's oily civility dispel his instinctive distrust of his skipper. A distrust which was accentuated—perhaps unfairly, he admitted secretly—by his uneasiness over Clara Inglepin's attitude.

She had as good as told him she was disloyal. But then, he argued with himself, the candor of her declaration was an earnest of essential honesty. As for her visit to Wellington, that might conceivably be dismissed as in connection with her grandfather's affairs—or to clear up some matter of business between her father and the British authorities in the past. Yet, on the other hand, if all this was so, why had she wavered with him at the last? Why had his careless use of the word "betray" aroused such a tempest?

The True Bounty slipped out over Tagus bar, and by sunset had sunk the Rock of Lisbon under the eastern horizon. The third day of the voyage Fellowes discovered the course had been altered to fetch the ship far north of the Western Islands, which he knew, were regular ports of call for all vessels plying to and from southern Europe. Inquiry informed him the neighborhood of the islands had become a regular cruising-ground for American privateers, as they provided a base within easy striking-distance of the converging routes of the British convoys from the West Indies and South America and the lordly East Indian of John Company's fleet. Evidently Chater was fighting shy of his own countrymen.

Barred, as he was, from any bond of sympathy with his brother officers. It was inevitable that Fellowes should be thrown more and more in Miss Inglepin's company. And she, on her part, made no secret of her preference for the Long Islander. She was like a child in her craving for entertainment, absorbing eagerly his hoard of experiences. He painted for her fever-ridden factories of the West African coast, jungle rivers where the tom-toms throbbed the night long and slavers anchored beside stinking barracoons, the icy tempests that beat about the Horn, and the languorous seas beyond. For her part, she gave him glimpses of a world equally exotic, spoke of evenings in the Pavilion at Brighton when the Prince Regent was condescending, narrated anecdotes, sad and humorous, of the stuffy Portuguese court.

There was inherent in her a fine and gracious reticence. And she impressed him more and more as unqualifiedly honest. She was a normal product of the background against which usually prevented them from dictory blend of the social forces of the Old World and the New.

She was, too, a keen politician and delighted to argue with him, although she was scrupulous to treat their differences with a lightness of touch which she had been reared, a contravailing.

"Aye de mi," she sighed one day toward the end of the voyage. "I cannot afford to quarrel with you, sir. I should die of ennui without your company."

"What will you say of me when I am a privateersman?"

"I'll say what I think," she retorted, blushing. "But you'll not go, if I can stay you."

"You'd have me bide at home with the cravens?"

"Why—" she hesitated—"I think all men of parts will find sufficient to occupy them before another year is out. We are on the verge of great events. 'Twill have had its use, perhaps, this war. But there! My tongue is runagate."

"Do you speak of rebellion?" he pressed. "Tis an ugly thought."

"Tis your word, not mine," she purried. "A true Democratic word." "No, our watchword is loyalty," he declared with feeling.

"Loyalty to what?" she mocked him. "To a pack of buckskin politicians and tavern orators."

"To an ideal—Independence," he exclaimed, irritated. "But what can you know of that, who are intimate with our enemies, and think as they do? I saw you with Lord Welling-ton in Lisbon, heard you talking with him."

Her face blanched; the finkers by which she hung to the rigging whitened under pressure.

"Sir," she said quietly, "you may think as you please of that. I shall say nothing."

And she quitted the deck before he could answer her, leaving him vexed by his own impetuosity and admiring the way in which she had taken it. He tasted humility as he trod the deck, keeping the early watch after dark, too downcast to notice her when she came from the cabin, a fluttering wealth in the golden yellow cloak she wore when the air was chill.

His first warning of her was the pressure of her fingers on his arm.

"Lion," she said, and his heart leaped a beat at that. "Lion! There was a little choke in her voice. "Lion," she gasped a third time.

He caught her arm.

"I'd cut my tongue out," he muttered hoarsely. "'Tis your secret."

"But I was wrong," she persisted. "I don't want you to think—as you please. I want you to believe—to believe—that I wouldn't do anything dishonorable. Truly, Lion!"

His arms wound about her, as their lips met, suddenly. Then she was gone from him, a shadow in the darkness.

CHAPTER III

Crimpin' Collishawe

Fellowes was happier than he had been for months. Tramping the poop, he hummed a tune, thinking how lucky he had been; saved from the Sachem, and conversely, from months, maybe years, in Dartmoor; meeting Cara—and home just over the horizon's rim. Cara—and home! Her Federalist tenings be brushed aside. As his wife—

"Sail ho!" He snatched a glass from the bin-nacle-rack and climbed into the mizen-shrouds. The morning was clear; he had no difficulty in making out the stranger, a lofty pile of canvas, driving down toward the True Bounty.

"Call Captain Chater," he hailed the deck, and Chater promptly popped out of the cabin-companionway almost as if he had expected the summons.

"A man-o'-war, Captain," Fellowes reported.

"Aye," he pronounced cheerfully. "she's the Badger sloop-of-war, Captain Collishawe."

"Collishawe," repeated Fellowes. "Crimpin' Collishawe!"

"That's him," Chater assented.

"He ought to be foul-bottomed," said Fellowes. "Most of these block-aders are. We'd have the wind of him if we ran south."

"Well, naow, why should we run for it?" drawled Chater.

"Why? Lord, man, Collishawe's pressed more Americans than any British officer on the station. 'Crimpin' Collishawe they call him. If he has a full crew, himself, he'll press for any other blockader that's short-handed."

Chater laughed in a peculiar noiseless way that always repelled Fellowes.

"I ain't consarned for him. We've got to pass the blockade to make Sandy Hook. And ye forget we run on license."

"I know," answered Fellowes, still perturbed; "but license or no, why risk your men?"

"All my crew carry press protections," rejoined Chater. "What's the use of tradin' on license, if ye can't make your home-port, heh? We'll jest hold to the course. I wouldn't wonder but mebbe Collishawe'd be kind of grateful for Peninsula news. And he always shortened sail whenever he sighted Miss Cara. 'Used to come to old Ben's house a lot when he was in New York."

Dust Now Recognized as Powerful Explosive

It is more or less generally well known that all dust accumulations represent a menace of no mean proportions. Dust is explosive and many mills were wrecked by this mysterious power before the real cause was understood. In a mine, for instance, the explosion taking place in one chamber was carried to the next and so on until the explosive force swept through the entire mine and the workings were wrecked completely. It is only within a comparatively few years that it was ascertained that this march of destruction was conducted through the subterranean passages by the accumulation of dust on the walls and in the crevices. Now this is avoided by a coating which is sprayed on and which prevents the dust thus treated from exploding. In the case of grain mills the damage done by these mysterious bursts was particularly severe and the government agencies have been giving considerable attention to the study of these mysterious blasts. In the course of some experiments it was found possible to drive an automobile engine by the use of finely powdered corn dust. —Louisville Courier-Journal.

Bride Tells Her Secret

"FOR a young bride of twenty-one to lose her vitality and pep is disastrous, almost a sacrilege," says Mrs. George E. Pillow, of Franklin, Va. "That, however," she continues, "is just what I did."

"I had only been married a few months to an athletic husband, who went everywhere and did everything. I tried to keep up with his pace, and simply collapsed under the strain. I never was really ill; just shallow-skinned, depressed, and lifeless. Swimming, dancing, golf, I just couldn't face them. When I began to lose my clear complexion, I was desperate."

"Then one day a girl friend came to pay me a visit. In the bottom of her little bag of clothes lay a crystal-clear bottle—Nujol! A short woman-to-woman talk—a telephone call to a neighboring drug store—and my future happiness was settled."

"That was a year ago. Now I too am never without Nujol, which has brightened and cleansed my body like a cake of pure soap. I eat, sleep, swim, and hike with the enthusiasm of a child. My complexion is all it used to be—and best of all—I am my husband's little pal again."

The wonderful thing about crystal-clear Nujol is that it is not a medicine; it contains no drugs—it cannot hurt even a baby. It is simply the normal internal lubrication which your body needs. Let Nujol clear the poisons out of your body (we all have them), and flood the sunshine of happiness into your life.

It sounds like a fairy tale, but millions of people have proved it. So can you. Get Nujol at any drug store—sold only in sealed packages, with the Nujol trademark. It costs but a few cents and it will make you feel like a million dollars!

The Fathers of Flight

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

AND if a Dayton (Ohio) high school boy back in the early eighties hadn't been hit in the face while playing a game of hockey (they called it "shinny on the ice" then), a recent historian might not have been able to tell the story of a modern wonder in these words:

"The sky is alive with winged craft. They dart through clouds and slide across the open blue. At night, unseen, they murmur their progress along starry pathways. They wend to distant cities. They cross the oceans, the continents, the North pole and—lately—the South pole. They make pictorial map surveys, patrol forests against fire, maneuver in military hosts, bring first aid to regions of disaster, poison insects in field and orchard, carry machine parts to remote mines and a prize cow to a fair, transport people and cash and mail. Cupid also has flown. 'Tis said a kiss improves with altitude."

"Tomorrow we can see the sky crowded with traffic, needing winged officers to keep the roads clear. At the top leviathan expresses roar along from Chicago to London, from New York to Moscow and from Boston to Peking. The middle distance is reserved for excursions to Greenland, the South seas and Patagonia. The broad highway below is occupied by commuters and local travelers on paltry five-hundred-mile runs, salesmen, week-enders, joy-riders, a motley crew with cheap and wobbly equipment who somehow get to their destinations as in the days of reconditioned fliers. The traffic officer has a task to make some of these people behave, keep on their side of the air and have their tail lamps on at night."

"Yet a quarter of a century ago no airplane existed!"

The man who painted that interesting word picture is John R. McMahon and the above quotation forms the opening paragraphs of his book, "The Wright Brothers, Fathers of Flight," published by Little, Brown and company. And the Dayton schoolboy who lost all of his front upper teeth in the game of shinny on the ice and as a result later became a co-discoverer of the secret of flight and co-inventor of the first successful airplane was Wilbur Wright who with his brother, Orville Wright, launched themselves into the air at Kitty Hawk, N. C., on December 17, 1903. On that date man flew for the first time.

The story of the Wright brothers is by now a familiar one to most Americans. The twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of the first successful flight of a heavier-than-air machine, held at Kitty Hawk, N. C., in 1928, not only attracted nationwide attention but spread their fame throughout the world. Only recently their names appeared in newspapers throughout the country in connection with two events. One was the announcement that a design submitted by two New York architects had been chosen for the great memorial which is to be erected to their memory at Kitty Hawk—an impressive stone shaft in the form of a huge wing, topped by a powerful searchlight air beacon. The other was the announcement that Orville Wright was to be the recipient of the first Daniel Guggenheim medal for notable achievement in the advancement of aeronautics, which will be awarded to him on April 30 in connection with the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers in Washington.

But well known as have become the names of Wilbur and Orville Wright and the story of their epoch-making feat a quarter of a century ago, the complete story of their careers is told for the first time in McMahon's book. And certainly, for the first time, such a thing as a connection between a game of shinny on the ice and man's conquest of the air, after centuries of trial and failure, has been established and that curious but significant fact told. It came about when Wilbur Wright, who was living in Dayton, Ohio, with his father, a bishop of the United Brethren church, his mother, his three brothers, Reuchlin, Lorin and Orville, and his sister, Katharine (now Mrs. Henry J. Haskell of Kansas City, Mo.) took a year's course in the Dayton high school in 1884-85. He had always been an athletic youngster and he soon became a leader in the sports of that high school. One day he was playing on the high school hockey team against a team composed of sons of officers in the home for veteran soldiers near Dayton.

During a melee in the course of the game a stick in the hands of an opponent slipped and struck young Wright a terrific blow on the mouth, knocking out all of his front upper teeth. An army surgeon bandaged him up but he refused the offers of a ride home, saying that he would walk lest it frighten his mother if he were carried home. "Among the effects of this injury were heart and stomach trouble," writes McMahon. "There followed a long period of delicate health if not semi-invalidism, with a diet confined to liquids, eggs and toast. It seemed to every one that the boy was handicapped for life and none dreamed of the possibility of a great compensation."

"Chance and trifles loom large in our story. Wilbur's teeth were knocked out in a shinny game, whence an important fact may be deduced. Poor health kept him at home for years, forbidding ventures into the outside world. He did not travel or marry like his elder brothers. He remained in contact with Orville and continued the collaboration on inventive feats. Time equalized the difference in age (Wilbur was born in 1867; Orville in 1871) and experience between them as they came to early manhood. The fraternal partnership, essential to future achievement but once impaired by age disparity, was now secure."

2. Wilbur Wright in the glider of 1902 at Kitty Hawk, N. C. The air was, in fact, conquered then. Only an engine and propellers were needed to make the glider an airplane.

This casualty on the ice in a hockey game, however, was only one in an interesting chain of events which led eventually to the invention of the first successful airplane. From the day their father aroused their childish interest in flying by the gift of a toy helicopter, the idea of conquering the air was implanted in the minds of both Orville and Wilbur Wright. It persisted during their first venture in business, after leaving high school—publishing a weekly newspaper in Dayton called the West Side News. It continued when they established themselves as manufacturers, repairers and retailers of bicycles which in the nineties were coming into wide vogue in America.

One night in the summer of 1896, while Orville was at home recuperating from typhoid fever, Wilbur sat in their shop reading a newspaper. He came upon an account of the death of Otto Lillenthal, a German engineer, in a glider accident. In the '80s and '90s the German had made hundreds of gliding flights and was experimenting with a power machine when the accident caused his death. Wilbur showed the article to Orville when the latter recovered.

They read eagerly of human attempts to solve flight, starting with a book, "Animal Mechanism," in their father's library. They wrote to the Smithsonian Institution for advice on what books to buy, perused the history of research from the Greek legend telling of Icarus falling into the sea when the sun melted wax fastenings of his wings to the gliding ventures of the Englishman, Percy Pilcher (killed in 1890) and Octave Chanute, an American pioneer in aeronautics.

Of the two groups of investigators in aeronautics, one having to do with powered machines and the other with gliders, they became more interested in the latter because they considered it a wasteful extravagance to mount costly machinery on wings which no one knew for sure how to manage. From speculating on the theory of gliders the next step was to make actual experiments in the air so that they could learn the fundamentals which had to be mastered before flights would be possible.

Previous investigators had failed because they could not keep gliders on an even keel. This seemed to the Wrights to be the most perplexing problem to be solved before man could fly. They finally decided on the correct principle to obtain stability—the principle that today is used in every airplane. It involved twisting the wings. But at first they did not see how they could apply it. The clew came to them by one of those examples of "chance and trifles" which McMahon mentions as looming so large in their life story.

One night in 1899 Orville and his sister visited with friends. Wilbur, in the bicycle shop, sought means of filling the idle hours caused by slack business. He picked up an empty cardboard box a customer had left on the counter after taking out an innertube. Wilbur was thinking of aviation all the time. The cardboard box would have been only a cardboard box to most men, but to Wilbur Wright it suggested experimentation.

Wilbur noticed that the oblong box resembled the biplane glider they had planned. He distorted its surfaces by twisting it. After a while he warped the right side upward and the left side downward. He studied it. Why couldn't their glider's surfaces be warped in such a manner so that a lateral balance could be maintained by applying varying vertical wind pressures on either wing?

When Orville returned he found Wilbur sketching his scheme. They discussed it far into the night, examining and twisting the cardboard box. They concluded that the time had come for action. They must now spend money and risk their lives in experiments. Instead of buying more books. But caution and lack of resources held them back a while and they contented themselves with building a model embodying their cardboard box principles.

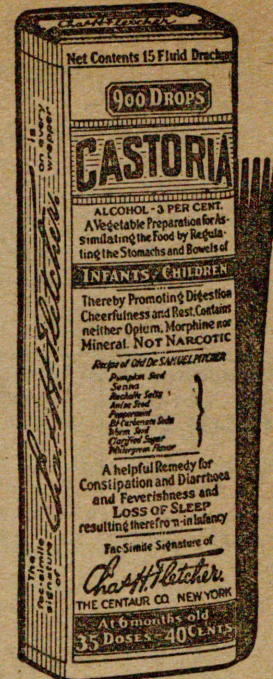

In the summer of 1900 they constructed their first glider of light, strong wood, with wings covered with tough muslin. In addition to wings that could be warped, it had a small horizontal plane in front which could be directed upward or downward at the discretion of the operator. They needed hills and winds of rather high velocity to test it, and these were not available near Dayton. As their glider was taking shape they wrote to the weather bureau at Washington for recommendations as to the best locality for glider experiments.

The weather bureau suggested the rolling terrain near Kitty Hawk, N. C. Correspondence with a North Carolina postmaster revealed that the hills were of sand, piled up by winds from the sea, and this encouraged the Wrights because sand would do less damage to a crashing glider and man than hard earth or rocks.

And that is how this town in North Carolina came to be associated with the pioneer experiments in flying and won its enduring fame as a milestone in the history of human progress. The Wrights arrived in Kitty Hawk in September, 1900, and made their first experiments with a glider which they had constructed. The experiment was not a success but in their failure they learned enough to encourage them to continue. The next year they were back, after having figured out accurate wind resistance tables upon which they realized the success of their experiments depended. By 1902 they had successfully solved the glider problem and the next thing was to design an engine to propel their craft. Within the next year that problem also had been solved and on December 17, 1903, the historic 12-second flight over a distance of 100 feet was made by Orville Wright.

That brief summary of the success of their experiments does not, of course, tell the full story of all the disappointments and discouragements which they encountered, nor the ridicule to which they, like all pioneers, were subjected by the skeptics who refused to believe that man would ever fly. Even they shared that doubt sometimes and once during a period of pessimism following a failure of the experiments, Wilbur Wright declared: "Nobody will fly for a thousand years." And yet within a year he himself was flying—because the Wright brothers wouldn't give up!

The upsets of Children

All children are subject to little upsets. They come at unexpected times. They seem twice as serious in the dead of night. But there's one form of comfort on which a mother can always rely; good old Castoria. This pure vegetable preparation can't harm the tiniest infant. Yet mild as it is, it soothes a restless, fretful baby like nothing else. Its quick relief soon sees the youngster comfortable once more, back to sleep. Even an attack of colic, or diarrhea, yields to the soothing influence of Castoria.

Keep Castoria in mind, and keep a bottle in the house—always. Give a few drops to any child whose tongue is coated, or whose breath is bad. Continue with Castoria until the child is grown! Every drugstore has Castoria; the genuine has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

Three Mothers Agree

When mother is tired, nervous or ill the whole home is upset. For her family's sake, every mother wants to be well and strong. These three women tell how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helps them to care for their families.

Mrs. H. Dolhonde, 6318 York St., New Orleans, Louisiana

"Before my last baby was born, I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got such good results that I named her Catherine Lydia. I have six older children and five grandchildren, too. I am now taking the Vegetable Compound again because of my age. I eat and sleep better and I do all my housework, and my washing. I will do my best to answer letters."

Mrs. Harold Goodnow, 36 Cane St., Fitchburg, Massachusetts

"I cannot praise your medicine enough. After my baby came I was rundown. I had to go to bed often through the day. I took three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I felt like a different woman. If any mother has those tired feelings I advise her to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. Lloyd R. Blasing, 115 So. Ohio St., Anaheim, California

"After my baby came I was so nervous and tired that I felt miserable. One day a booklet was left at our door and after reading it I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am now on my fourth bottle and I feel much stronger. It has helped me in every way and I feel sure that other women in rundown condition will pick up if they will only take a few bottles."

many large commercial exhibits will will be a magnificent feature of the beauty to the semi-tropical garden, being built by the Chicago West end of the Stadium, is well advanced and in many parts of the build-structural bases for other gardens.Mrs. Fred Court, chairman of the a tea room will be installed on one of the terraces where visitors can enjoy light refreshments while viewwhich will be played by Ralph Wal-been made for operating a fine din-

VOTE FOR

ALOYSIUS B. McCARNEY

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR State

Representative

OF THE

41st District

Comprising Will and DuPage Counties.

A man many of the readers of the News-Bulletin may recall as one of the first men in Will County who very ably pointed out the dangers that were incorporated in the proposed Constitution in 1923 and helped bring about its defeat. He is now seeking the support of the people of the 41st Senatorial District as a candidate for the general assembly.

In order that he can use his 18 years of experience as Legislative Representative of the B. of L. F. & E. in order to help protect the interests of the people in their efforts to get relief from the tax burden that confronts the farmer and small home owner of today. This district needs such a man at this time. As you are going to have an opportunity to vote by a referendum vote an amendment to the revenue section of the constitution of the state of Illinois, this referendum will grant the right to the general assembly to revise the method of taxation now in vogue under the old state constitution.

By voting for Aloysius B. McCarney you assure yourself of the man who can be depended upon to protect your interests as above stated.

AUG. MAUE SEEKS RENOMINATION

County Superintendent of Schools August Maue, of Will County was born in Frankfort Township in this county and has lived his life here.

He was graduated from Adrian Normal school before he began teaching, because he believed in adequate preparation then, as he does now. After teaching two years, he became a student in the University of Illinois and obtained his degree from that institution, following four years of study. Since all of his studies were directed toward teaching, his preparation was thorough.

In his senior year he received an offer to enter the editorial department of a leading agricultural journal but declined because he thought that he should teach.

Mr. Maue did all of his teaching in Will County, beginning in District 187 in Crete township, and extending thru superintendency of town schools, teacher in the Joliet high school, principal of grammar school in Joliet and terminating in the position of County Superintendent of Schools which he now holds.

He is a member of the Illinois State Teachers Reading Circle board and treasurer of that organization; he has been a member of that committee on the state course of study for years; he is a member of the legislative committee of the Illinois County Superintendents' association and has been an active worker in the general assembly during the last eight years. In this sphere, he has helped to secure progressive legislation for schools, increasing the state distributive fund from six to ten millions of dollars. He is a member of the committee to revise the state teachers pension and retirement fund, appointed by the state association.

His slogan is a "high grade school education for every boy and girl in Will County." To that end he has established two year high schools in Channahon, Elwood, Manhattan, Mo.

ILLINOIS RIVER PROJECT PICKED FOR EARLY ACTION

Completion of the Illinois waterway link of the Mississippi River barge transportation system was among 46 waterway projects recommended to President Hoover for inclusion in this year's rivers and harbors appropriation. Chairman Wallace Dempsey of the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors and Congressman William E. Hull of Illinois, one of the ranking members of the committee, discussed the list of preferred projects with the President. They outlined to him the freight tonnages available for transportation which these improvements would accommodate. William R. Dawes of Chicago, president of the Mississippi Valley Improvement Association, accompanied the House committee members to urge immediate Federal aid for the Illinois project. The president is believed to agree that early action on the Illinois link is necessary so that the Mississippi system can be operated as a unit. Mr. Dempsey estimates the omnibus bill will run over $100,000,000. It is understood that $7,000,000 may be recommended for Illinois.

PLAN NEW CHICAGO-NEW YORK RAIL LINE

The proposed New York-to-Chicago route will be a "railroad of highly superior type and unequaled operating efficiency and economy, and would have great military value in aid of national defense," L. F. Loree its sponsor and president of the Delaware and Hudson company, told the Interstate Commerce Commission last week in a hearing. To complete the proposed short-cut would involve the construction of 284 miles of new track between Easton and Alleghany City, Pa., to cost $177,000,000. The new route would have no curve sharper than 4 degrees and be laid with 127 pound rails.

VIEWS ON DISARMAMENT

Interesting development of the London Naval conference, whether our delegates succeed or not, is the clear view it provides of the diametrically opposed positions held by France and Europe on the one hand, England and the United States on the other, concerning peace programs. The French view, typical of others on the continent who have been subject to frequent and recent invasions of home soil, is that peace may be guaranteed only by an adequately organized international police system. The English, unfamiliar with war on their own soil though equally abhorrent of it, would denounce war and cut down armies and navies to the lowest extent reasonable for national security, feeling that large armies and navies in themselves produce war. The two do not mix.

THE STRANGE POWERS OF SUNLIGHT

To restore to the human body the vital energies usually supplied by the ultra-violet rays in the sunshine, but denied most of us due to the sunlessness of modern life, a lamp supplying electrical sunlight is fast becoming an essential of good health. Now experiment shows that the life, lustre and clarity of famous oil paintings can be restored by the use of such man-made sunlight. At the left is Alfred H. Maurer, the well known American Modernist and a director of the League of Independent Artists, with one of his controversial paintings which he has restored to its original brilliance by the use of a mercury quartz vapor lamp after it had dulled in a sunless drawing-room. Minutes under the lamp equal many hours under "Old Sol." (Herbert Photos, New York City, N. Y.)

Russian Soviet Puts Ban

on Time-Honored Kissing
Moscow's latest edict is "Thou shalt not kiss!" according to travelers recently returned from Russia, who relate that the Soviet chiefs, not content with abolishing church, crown, marriage—and other institutions beloved of man and woman—are now conducting a furious campaign against the kiss. The campaign will come as a shock to those who knew Russia in the good old days before the war, when friends, relations, comrades, and countrymen embraced each other whenever and wherever they met—sometimes as many as twenty times a day. A kiss approximated to a handshake or to a lifted hat then. "In no land," declared Alexandre Dumas pere in one of his travel books, "have I seen people embrace each other so much as in Russia." Now propaganda has invaded literature, and the latest novel from Moscow ends with this last page advice: "Eighteen-year-old heroine to her lover: 'A kiss? Young man, do you realize what a kiss means?'"

Speedy Toys in Europe

Children in Europe are demanding speed in their toys. Six-year-old Mario Contorno recently appeared on the streets of Paris on his motor-driven unicycle. Three-year-old Warner Kimpel, son of a famous German auto racer, has his own electric racing car, and Alfredo Bonifatti, aged four, drives through the streets of Rome on a tiny, but speedy, motor cycle.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson, Secretary of the Illinois State Association, Chicago

"Business cannot prosper when poverty haunts the farms and the farmer cannot sell his products when unemployment walks the streets of the cities," Gov. Louis L. Emmerson declared, before a conference of utility experts and farm leaders in Springfield, March 20. The object of the conference was to discuss plans for extension of rural electrification.

"Capital cannot find markets when labor is poorly paid, and labor cannot find work when capital is not employed," Governor Emmerson continued.

"I hope that out of this conference there will come suggestions for a program which will give to the farm the advantages which electricity has brought to the city. This is not too much to expect of a state, which, in less than a century, has grown from a wilderness where hardy pioneers fought for existence with savages and wild animals to a state with a population of 7,500,000, ranking second in finance, near the top in agriculture and industry."

H. L. Williamson, secretary of the Illinois Press association and publicity chairman of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, has announced a program whereby a committee composed of leading newspaper men of the state will gather details on all points of scenic and historical interest in Illinois, to be used by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce as the basis for an attractive and instructive booklet for use in circulating to all travel service bureaus and other sources for information concerning travel. The primary purpose of the plan is frankly admitted to be to increase the amount of tourist travel both by Illinoisans and residents of other states.

"This effort, if successfully carried through, is expected to prove profitable to Illinois industries, to Illinois merchandising organizations and in the development of various Illinois commodities—apples, peaches and so forth," the committee announcement states. "Help to sell Illinois to the world," is the committee's slogan.

Within 30 days Illinois will start its 1930 road construction program with a goal of 750 miles of new pavement before the end of the season. Between $26,000,000 and $30,000,000 will be spent for the new roads. That announcement was made by Director H. H. Cleveland of the department of public works and buildings and Chief Highway Engineer Frank T. Sheets.

Speaking before the fourth district business conference at Belvidere, Wayne Hummer, president Illinois Chamber of Commerce, announced that it was the hope of the organization that a plan for Illinois, similar to the Chicago plan, could be worked out through the recently created civic development department of the association, by fall. Mr. Hummer said, "From Maine to California, those who know agree that in 15 or 20 years, Chicago and environs will be the most scientifically developed community in the world, and for one reason—the Chicago plan and the Chicago Regional plan. If a plan is essential in order to insure the scientific development of Chicago and adjacent territory, why not a state plan for Illinois?"

Among the various research projects under way in the program launched by the department of public health in co-operation with the medical college of the state university is a method of pasteurizing milk in the home, which has been practically completed, under the supervision of Dr. Lloyd Arnold, head of the Chicago branch of the state diagnostic laboratory and faculty member of the medical college of the university. "This process," says Dr. Andy Hall, state health director, "will bring to rural people, and to those in communities where commercial pasteurization is not practiced, a serviceable method of safeguarding their own milk supplies. This will be especially advantageous to mothers of young children."

Regional conferences conducted by the library extension division are being held in 13 different centers this year, so located that at least one institute shall be convenient for each library. Some topics being considered are: New amendments to the library law; increase in the tax rate, and contract plan for extending library service; statewide publicity; selection and buying of books for school libraries; new books; new professional literature.

Speaking before a conference of utility men and farm leaders in Springfield on March 20, Gov. Louis L. Emmerson declared, "The state is operating today with a tax system that is hopelessly out of date. Our revenue structure is as anachronistic as would be a team of oxen in these days of rapid transportation." He declared the revision of our system of taxation to be the most important question before the people of Illinois today, and said that he would lend "any honest effort and the enthusiastic support of my administration" to its solution.

Extensive plans have been made by section chairman of the Illinois Academy of Science, to make the next annual meeting to be held at the University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign, in conjunction with the twenty-fifth anniversary celebration of the Illinois State Geological Survey, May 2-3, interesting not only to teachers in colleges and universities of the state, but also to high school teachers. The annual public address following the banquet, May 2, is to be given by Prof. Griffith Taylor, D. Sc., noted Australian geologist, geographer, climatologist, explorer and author.

Eight of the 15 reporting cities for which employment figures are separately compiled by the bureau of statistics, industrial commission, Illinois department of labor, show an increase in both factory employment and pay roll totals. The fact that pay roll totals increased in 13 of these 15 cities, and increased on the average for all other cities, indicates a trend toward improvement in the industrial situation, since it reflects a fairly general decline in the amount of part-time work throughout the state.

Edward J. Hargrave, of Chicago, president of the internationally known secret service agency bearing his name, is a candidate for the Republican nomination as congressman-at-large.

Director Leo H. Lowe of the department of trade and commerce has announced that the Chicago grain inspection division of the department will be moved from the Imperial building on South Park street to the Postal Telegraph building, the move to be completed by the middle of April. The object of the change is to have the quarters nearer the Chicago Board of Trade building.

The heads of three utility organizations were chosen at a recent meeting of utility executives at Springfield. They are: C. A. Richardson, Chicago, president Illinois Electric Railways association; H. T. East, Chicago, president Illinois Gas association; O. R. Hogue, Chicago, president Illinois State Electric association. George W. Schwaner, Springfield, was re-elected secretary-treasurer of the three associations.

Mrs. George T. Page, Peoria, was made honorary state regent of the Daughters of the American Revolution of Illinois at the final session of the state convention in Chicago, March 20. Other officers elected were: Mrs. O. K. Yeager, Danville, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Lyle D. Watkins, Petersburg, librarian, and Mrs. Melville C. Chatten, Winnetka, registrar. An appropriation of $1,600 was voted for the endowment of two rooms in a school being conducted by the D. A. R. of South Carolina at Tamassé, for the education of mountain children.

Revision of its standard specifications for road and bridge construction has just been completed by the Illinois division of highways. Bids to be received by the state on April 11, the first road letting of the 1930 season, will be based on these new specifications. Gov. Louis L. Emmerson and Director H. H. Cleveland were informed by Chief Highway Engineer Frank T. Sheets. The most important change is the adoption of the weight method of proportioning concrete aggregates. This has made necessary development of scientific design of the concrete mixture, and the division of highways has worked out a method based on data compiled at the University of Illinois by Professors A. N. Tibot and Frank T. Richart, nationally known concrete engineers.

One story is to be cut off the administration building at the Jacksonville state hospital, when it is remodeled as a result of a recent fire, and the inside is to be modernized, including the elimination of the "corkscrew" stairways, according to plans being drawn by State Architect C. Herrick Hammond. The work is to be done this summer, and is expected to cost about $75,000.

From June 21 to June 29, the regular army of the Sixth corps area (comprising Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois) will give in the Grant Park stadium, Soldier field, Chicago, an exposition of all the present means of national defense, both by exhibits and demonstrations by troops. Airplanes, tanks, artillery, infantry, cavalry, all arms of the service, will take part in this great military tournament and exposition.

Walter H. Eckersall, one of the most famous football stars of all time and football expert for the Chicago Tribune, died at Chicago after a heart attack.

With the completion of the Florence bridge, on state highway No. 36, near Pittsfield, scheduled for May 10, Director Harry H. Cleveland of the department of public works and buildings is perfecting plans for dedicating the new structure. Gov. Louis L. Emmerson is expected to participate in the ceremonies. Gov. Henry S. Caulfield of Missouri will be invited, and the co-operation of citizens in the adjacent communities will be sought to celebrate the passing of the old ferry and the spanning of the Illinois river by the 3,195-foot bridge.

Lesson for April 6

THE LAW OF THE CROSS

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 16:13-26.
GOLDEN TEXT—If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow Me.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Proving our Love for Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Proving our Love for Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Denying Self for Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Cross-bearing in the Christian Life.

The lesson topic is narrower than the Scripture text. It includes Christ taking account of His ministry, Peter's confession, Christ's prediction concerning His death and His teaching concerning the cost of discipleship.

1. Christ, the King, Taking Account of His Ministry (vv. 13-17).

1. The place (v. 13).

It was at Caesarea Philippi, the northern limit of Jewish territory, practically in Gentile territory.

2. The time in Christ's ministry.

The cross was only a few months away. The King had already been rejected. They had charged Him with being in league with the devil and sought to kill Him. It was highly important that the disciples have clear views as to Christ's person in order to stand the test of His trial and crucifixion.

3. Peter's confession (vv. 13-16).

(1) The occasion (vv. 13-15). Two questions asked by Jesus Christ provoked this confession. A. As to the opinion of the people concerning Him (vv. 13, 14). They recognized Him as a teacher and prophet of more than human authority and power. Had He been content with this, He would not have been molested in Jerusalem. It was His persistent claim of being the God-man, the very Son of God, that sent Him to the cross. B. As to the personal opinion of the disciples (v. 15). It was not enough for them to be able to tell what opinion the people held concerning Jesus. It was necessary that they have definite, correct and personal knowledge of and belief in Him. (2) The content (v. 16). It consisted of two parts. A. "Thou art the Christ." This avowed Jesus to be the Messiah—the fulfiller of the Jewish hopes and expectations. B. "The Son of the living God." This acknowledged Him to be divine. It was the recognition of His glorious person in keeping with the Jewish hope (Isa. 9:6, 7).

4. Christ's confession of Peter (v. 17).

Those who confess Christ shall be confessed by Him (Matt. 10:32, 33). Christ pronounced a blessing upon Peter—not in the nature of reward, but a declaration of the spiritual condition of Peter because of his clear apprehension of his Lord.

5. Christ's charge to the disciples (v. 20).

He asked them not to tell any man that He was the Messiah. The time was not ripe for such testimony.

II. The New Body, the Church, Announced (vv. 18, 19).

Following the confession of Peter, Jesus declared His intention of bringing into existence a new body, to the members of which He would give eternal life, and into whose hands He would entrust the keys of the Kingdom. Peter was to have a distinguished place in this body. Association in this new body cannot be broken by death, for the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it.

III. The King Predicts His Death (vv. 21, 23).

This prediction was no doubt startling to the disciples. They did not yet realize that redemption was to be accomplished through the passion of the cross. So unwelcome was this announcement that Peter cried, "This shall not be unto Thee." Later Peter saw through the darkness to the sunlight on the hilltops beyond. A new hope filled his breast (1 Pet. 1:3, 4). Victory through death is yet the stumbling block of many.

IV. The Cost of Discipleship (vv. 24-26).

Life can be saved only by losing it. If we are going to be Christians, we must share Christ's suffering.

1. There must be denial of self (v. 24). There is a wide difference between self-denial and denial of self. All people practice self-denial, but only rare disciples of Christ deny self.

2. "Take up His cross" (v. 24). This cross is the shame and suffering which lie in the path of loyalty to Christ.

3. Follow Christ (v. 24). This means to have the mind of Christ—to be like Christ.

Flowers That Are Not Seen
If a man could make a single rose, we should give him an empire; yet roses and flowers no less beautiful, are scattered in profusion all over the world, and few regard them.—Martin Luther.

A Life in His Hands
The right thing is not always the easiest; but God has His schools for training, and a life left in His hands will never fall of its highest development here and hereafter.—Selected.

Why Voters Should Register

In defending the law requiring the voters to register, Arthur Huebsch Republican Candidate for State senator in Cook County says:

"In territory where it may seem popular one of my opponents is urging his election because a law was enacted requiring registration of the voters before the next general election. That law was passed without a single vote in either house being registered against it, and was signed by Gov. Emmerson. I am proud to say that I believe in honest elections, and a first step in securing honest elections, is a correct poll list. The only way people can know who is entitled to vote is by having them register. Time is provided so all may do so without inconvenience. It is a practice approved by all friends of honest elections and is condemned only by those who do not favor honest elections, but still believe it is right to have 'floaters' vote early and often."

Wm. A. Burmeister

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE FOR SHERIFF OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS

Primary Election, Tues. Apr. 8, 1930

WM. A. BURMEISTER PLATFORM

If elected Sheriff, I shall give the office all my time and personal attention. It will be run on an economical and efficient basis. All complaints will receive prompt and courteous attention.

The office of Sheriff should be run the same as any well regulated business. Capable and efficient appointments will be named by me.

Due to the use of high powered automobiles by criminals in the perpetration of crime or escaping the law, the adequate policing of the numerous roads in Cook County leading into Chicago, is of prime importance. I pledge myself to appoint only such men for this duty who are courageous, honest and efficient. If any officer is discovered accepting a gratuity of any nature, he will be summarily dismissed by me. It shall be my purpose to establish cordial and effective co-operation between the Sheriff's office and the local officials of all the towns and villages in Cook County.

Realizing the great importance of the County jail to the community at large, special attention will be given to its supervision. I pledge myself to be elected, to consult with the various civic organizations of Cook County that are interested in its welfare and promise that all appointments to positions in said jail will be required to give their entire time and attention to their duties.

I further pledge that all civil and criminal processes coming into my hands for service will be served promptly nor will the acceptance of any gratuity by any officer or employee be permitted.

I further pledge that if elected Sheriff, in every case where a bond is required, that a careful examination of such bond and security will be made by competent and experienced employees so that the county and litigants will be amply and properly protected.

The Sheriff is chief law enforcement officer of Cook County and as such, if elected, I shall use all means at my command to suppress notorious and disreputable places.

Walker for Sheriff!

During the time JOHN D. WALKER was Sheriff of Will County, calls from farmers were given particular attention whether in NIGHT OR IN DAY TIME.

When a milk strike was on, SHERIFF WALKER sent deputies out for the purpose of protecting farmers against raids by armed milk trucks from Chicago.

Since Mr. Walker's retirement we have been left to the MERCY OF CHICKEN THIEVES, HUNTERS, TRESPASSERS AND VANDALS.

A vote for Walker for Sheriff is A Vote for Law and Order.
